

The Russell Cabins at The Ridge

While the world has changed a great deal since the 1930s, Russell Cabins have been frozen in time. Interstates have been built across the nation, but the same dirt roads provide access to the Russell Cabins. While time seems to move faster and faster, Russell Cabins remain a testament to a tried-and-true lake lifestyle sitting humbly in the forest.

As attractive and humble as these cabins are, many people desire slightly more space and modern features which these older cabins cannot provide. Therefore, an upgrade was in order for the next generation of cabins.

Any upgrade had to maintain that rustic, modest look in order to be added to the Russell Cabin list. It is not easy creating a design that is attractive, functional, and “cabiney” all at the same time.

For years, people have wanted to “own” a Russell Cabin, but these humble little cabins have only been available for rent. For the first time in our history, it is possible to own a “Russell Cabin.” Proper land planning would not allow for random ownership of cabins, so the concept of creating an enclave of cabins was born. The perfect piece of land with big water views, mature trees, and deep water lots was selected just inside the entry of The Ridge.

Not just any structure could be called a Russell Cabin. After a careful search, well-known designers, Bill Farshee (refreshing a Bobby McAlpine-inspired design), Bill Ingram, Taylor Dawson, Alex Krumdieck, and Jonathan Torode were selected to create nine plans for this very special neighborhood. Our direction to the architects was to create cabins that were modest in size but generous in modern features, while utilizing a blend of rustic materials and timeless architecture. The resulting nine designs are very livable with the simple, modest look demanded by lovers of Russell Cabins. House size limitations and careful land planning provide privacy that is “ideal for family and friends.”

The Ridge

The Ridge is Russell Lands On Lake Martin's largest neighborhood to date, chosen for its centralized location, distinctive beauty, and unique topography - which provides much deeper water at the end of the pier than a typical lakefront homesite. A multi-phase development spanning 850 acres featuring fine Southern craftsmanship and beautiful waterfront and water-access homesites, The Ridge is where life and lake truly meet. Few people can boast having Lake Martin in their backyard, and your family will enjoy countless hours shared in the sunshine and creating new traditions. As a resident, you'll have access to The Ridge Club, a 10-acre recreation complex with tennis, swimming, children's play park, fitness center, and more. And with 5 miles of Ridge Trails in the neighborhood, you can hike, bike or take a leisurely stroll whenever the mood strikes. When it's time for a boat ride (and when isn't it?), The Ridge Marina, one of the country's largest and most modern lakefront marinas, can handle every detail. Valet service can have your boat fueled, prepped, and delivered to your dock.
